CARBON, ALBERTA, THURSDAY, NOV. 20, 1947

Authorized as second class mail, Post Office Department, Ottawa.

Political discussions and arguments in the nation's capital this week covered a very wide range of subjects. It indicates how very complex our modern life has become and how seriously our welfare is affected by forces that sometimes appear remote. There is much speculation on the significance of last week's municipal elections in Great Britain and most detached observers agree that it is a severe set back to socialism and what socialists and communists euphemistically refer to as a "planned economy."

No one seriously expects a new election at this time. It is the general impression that the British labor government will make every effort to stay in office hoping for something that will halt the decline in its economy. It is recognized that the growing sentiment against socialism in England has a depressing effect on CCF supporters in Canada and CCF leaders are striving desperately to "play down" the importance of the municipal elections. The CCF party in Canada belongs to and actively promotes a union of Empire socialist parties. It is noted here that the "gallup" poll of Britain confirms the heavy loss of support for the labor government and a considerable gain by the Conservative party.

Progressive Conservative Self Analysis

Reports from a number of places indicate a searching self-analysis by leaders and supporters of the progressive conservative party since their latest stunning defeat in York-Sunbury election. Daily and weekly newspapers supporting the party are almost unanimous in calling for a positive and distinctive policy for the party. They also demand a radical change in the party leaders "strategy and tactics."

The daily papers are guarded in their suggestions as to what the new policy should be but all agree that it should be definite. At least one weekly paper that gives unwavering support to the party has a clear cut suggestion. It is that the P.C. party propose and advocate a commonwealth customs union, a policy which it claims would be in accord with conservative tradition and would evoke enthusiasm within the party. This will be in contrast to the Liberal government's policy of maintaining a balance between its relations with the British Commonwealth, the United States and other nations of the world.

John Diefenbaker, prominent party leader, denies the need for new policies feels that the party's need is for a publicity campaign to inform the public what the party stands for. Observers here are waiting for the opening session of parliament to see what effect the criticisms have on the party leadership which has been under fire from within its own ranks.

Drastic Change in Policy

Observers here who have been reading newspaper accounts of socialist leader Coldwell's tour of Western Canada see a radical change in his policy with respect to war. In a Vancouver interview he placed himself definitely on the side of "preparedness" against war. This is in striking contrast to previous CCF policy.

It is noted with interest here that at Prince Rupert Mr. Coldwell denied that he had ever been offered the Liberal leadership thus leaving many of his supporters out on a limb. This statement finally settles a number of arguments and even bets in the Capital. He said he had been "approached" on the subject of the Liberal leadership but did not say by whom. The approach was made by the Liberal Party.

A Canadian Economy

There is much speculation among observers here on the government's plans for maintaining our Canadian economy. In the face of some movement in favor of a customs union with Great Britain and the suggestion of a prominent weekly financial paper that we are heading for a customs union with United States, Liberal opinion in the Capital seems to favor a Canadian economy. That this will not be a policy of isolation but of co-operation was shown by the announcement of the trade treaties made at Geneva.

Interest in the government's plans for a strictly Canadian economy is heightened by the reports of a new government department presided over by Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe. By people of all parties Mr. Howe's name is always linked with achievement. An integrated program to encourage and promote further development of our resources and expanding the degree of domestic processing can greatly expand our exports to the United States and keep our high employment level.

WEDDING

St. Mary's Cathedral, Calgary was the scene of a wedding on November 8th when Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. S. Smith solemnized the marriage of Catherine Alberta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McCarthy of Calgary and Mr. Nicodemus (Nick) Matthew Schmaltz, son of Mrs. A. Schmaltz of Beiseker and the late Mr. Schmaltz. The altar was banked with roses and chrysanthemums.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, was gowned in nylon brocaded satin cut in simple princess lines and falling into a deep train. The Victorian sleeves were pointed at the wrists and her floor-length veil was held in place by a steeple headdress of brocaded satin. She carried a cross of roses and blue streamers tipped with rosebuds.

Mrs. M. P. Boyle of Lingman Lake, Ont., was matron of honor, and Miss Theresa McCarthy was bridesmaid. Mr. Louis Schmaltz attended the groom and ushers were George Pusev, Tony Schmaltz and Alan Campbell.

A reception for 200 guests was held at the home of the bride's parents where Msgr. Smith proposed the bridal toast.

A three-piece tailored suit of handstooth plaid was worn by the bride for her wedding trip. An off-the-face hat in black felt with matching accessories and an orchid completed her ensemble.

A national advisory committee on mental health soon will be established in Canada.

Britain Builds Ships

ONE OF THE GRIMMEST FEATURES of the recent war was the Battle of the Atlantic. The high rate at which ships carrying vitally needed cargoes from this continent to Britain were destroyed constituted one of the major difficulties in defeating the enemy, and represented staggering losses in men, ships and supplies. In wartime these sinkings were extremely serious, and they have continued to affect the shipping situation ever since because of the critical shortage of ships which resulted from such extensive losses. Ever since the end of the war, efforts have been made to build merchant and passenger ships in sufficient numbers to meet the great post-war demand for shipping space, but many are still needed to fulfill present requirements.

Large Program Is Undertaken

In this connection, the British Ministry of Information has recently given out some details of the ship-building program in that country. The United Kingdom is possessed of a fine tradition for the craft of building ships, and every big ship-building yard there is now carrying out an extensive construction program to replace wartime losses. Ships under construction or on order at the present time are estimated to amount to more than 3,000,000 gross tons, while there are another 3,500,000 tons under repair or being converted for other uses than those for which they were originally built. In spite of the severe shortages of labor and materials with which the builders must contend, Britain is reported to be now building more ships than all other countries put together and is endeavoring to fill not only her own needs, but to supply other countries.

To Fill Many Outside Orders

Since the end of the war, overseas countries have ordered 323 ships, valued at $360,000,000 with United Kingdom ship builders. These do not include large orders from other parts of the British Commonwealth. More ships are being built, however, for British shipping companies than for those of any other country, and these companies will receive more than one-third of the present world construction. Britain is, in the words of the article published by the Ministry of Information "making valiant efforts to restore the service on the seven seas which won such prestige before the war." It is clear that the building up of her merchant and passenger fleets is a most important factor in post-war recovery, and United Kingdom ship-builders are to be commended for the splendid effort which they are making at this time.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD FOR WINTER TRAPPING

THE PAS, Man.—Prospects of a good winter beaver trapping season in Central and Northern Manitoba districts and of a boom in muskrat trappings in the spring were seen here by game officials. They said foxes and weasels were abundant in the territory around Pukatawagan, about 30 miles north of Sherridon, in Northern Manitoba, and that a good catch is almost certain.

Some scientists believe the tortoise to be the most intelligent of reptiles.

Peppermint Now Grown On B.C. Farm

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C.—Oil extract from peppermint, enough to supply Canadian requirements, may soon be produced in this Fraser Valley district.

An experimental nine-acre field of peppermint, only one in the province, is being grown on the model farm operated by George Reifel. Roots of the plants were imported from Oregon two years ago, and oil is being extracted by a distillation process in a small pilot plant. Harvest now is in progress.

The mint patch must be kept entirely free of weeds. It is cut like hay, the stems and leaves being allowed to cure before being put through the still. The oil brings $7 a pound and is used chiefly by gum manufacturers.

Clothing Is Great Problem In Britain

Coupons Have To Cover Needed House Furnishings Too

Fewer, fewer, fewer... that's the way clothing coupons are going in Britain, and with news that most things will be switched over to help the export drive it looks as if clothing for the home market will be even scarcer before very long. The ration for the next five months from October 1 is 20 clothing coupons. As a suit rates 18, costs the same, most women in Britain will find it hard to buy either this winter. The remaining two coupons won't even buy a pair of stockings... which take three! And those 20 coupons have to last until the beginning of March. That's only half the problem; the greatest is that after six years of clothes rationing everything needs renewing and the same coupons have to be used for sheets, table linen and furnishing fabrics. It means continuing with "make do and mend", "patch and carry on", for a long time to come.

Your heart beats 100,000 times a day.

Gentle reader, you who owe us for this paper you are reading, as well as for several of its ancestors: Did you ever see an editor's pocketbook? Well, it is just as fallible and prone to emptiness as those of other common mortals. The newspaper business hasn't yet been brought to that degree of perfection that it can be run without expense, and until that is successfully done we shall be under the painful necessity of asking you for a little cash now and then, especially NOW. We have been patient, in some cases long suffering, knowing that your pocket books were about as lean and lank as were our own. But now, the harvest is past and some of you have sold your hogs. When the dollars begin to fill your breeches pocket please remember that vacuum in the editorial purse.

Motorists Warned Of Poisonous Fumes

Fresh warning of the dread danger of carbon monoxide has been given by officials of the Alberta Motor Association.

This is the time of year when motorists have to be especially on guard against these poisonous fumes which in past years have taken a dreadful toll of lives. Many motorists still drive old model cars having not been able to obtain newer models as soon as desired.

Motor Club officials say that care to avoid carbon monoxide should be taken particularly in the case of those operating old machines.

Many fatalities have occurred while starting up the car in the garage when preparing to leave for work in the morning. Make certain that one or more of the car windows are open and that there is sufficient space for fresh air to circulate.

Carbon monoxide works stealthily but in a deadly way. Be on guard against it. During this winter season, see that lots of fresh air is circulating to ward off the poisonous fumes.

Market Turkeys Early

There are thousands of early hatched turkeys in Alberta that should have been marketed for Thanksgiving and there are many thousands of additional turkeys that will be ready for marketing not later than the middle of November. C. W. Traves, poultry commissioner for the Alberta department of agriculture says that in the past there has been the custom of practice to consider turkeys as a Christmas commodity and very few people think of marketing them before that time. The early hatching of poults in commercial hatcheries and on the farms has resulted this year in a large number of turkeys that should be marketed now.

Many of the hatchery poults come from broad breasted flocks and the feather quality of this type of turkey is not of a very high standard in many instances. As the turkeys reach maturity and are ready to be put on the market, thousands of birds develop dry, brittle feathers that break off very easily. If the birds are kept two or three weeks beyond the time when they should be marketed, it is not long before they will be full of dry feather stubs, which will put A grade birds down to C grade because it is impossible to remove these feather stubs.

In addition to the lack of feather quality in many of the broad breasted turkeys, they have been developed for early maturity, and this means that if they are kept four or five weeks past the time when they should have been marketed, they become stabby and are graded by many of the receiving stations as old birds. Also many of these birds, as they reach maturity, tend to go off their legs.

The feed situation is very serious, says Mr. Traves, and poultrymen cannot afford to feed any more of these heavy feed consuming birds any longer than is absolutely necessary. Birds that are not well fleshed and fully feathered should be marketed, not held for the final Christmas rush.

Rockyford Youth Prefers Farm

Bright city lights have little attraction for many boys and girls born and raised on the farm. At least, that is the opinion of the majority of 90 young people in Toronto from all over Canada to compete for Dominion honor in boys' and girls' farm club competitions.

Even though they might have always wanted to see an escalator or a museum, most freely admitted that the "big city" has not the appeal of rural life. Harvey Katterhagen, 20, who operates a 1,000-acre farm at Rockyford, says he thinks a farmer has more freedom than a city industrial worker. He has no desire to sit in an office or punch a time-clock.

All champions in their own right these boys and girls won regional or provincial agricultural competitions and are termed "the brightest young people in Canada" by A. E. MacLaurin, general secretary of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work.

BEISEKER NEWS

Mrs. Henry Q Berreth underwent a tonsil operation in a Calgary hospital last week.

H. Reding and Geo. Pfeifer attended a bull sale in Calgary recently. George outbid all prospective buyers and before he could stop himself, he became the proud owner of Rose Butte Hope 4th. Mood also bid and came home with Rose Butte Hope 3rd.

The owners at this sale was the Lethbridge Northern Irrigation District farm. Mr. John Graham, Acme, also had some of his livestock at the sale. Mr. Reding reports that prices were not exceptionally high.

Mr. G. L. Raw thinks that the third of the month is more unlucky than the thirteenth. Here's what happened to him on November 3rd:

He nearly upset his truck:
Mrs. Rau broke her washing machine.

His daughter, Gloria, had an attack of appendicitis and was rushed to the hospital.

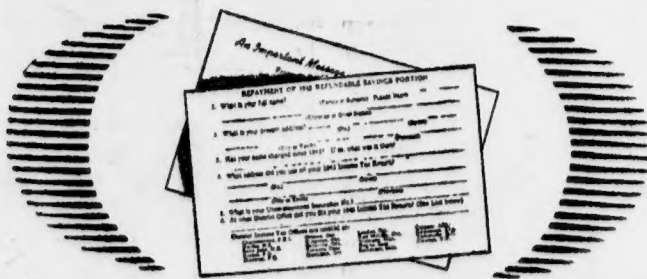

His son lost a heifer.

Mrs. Leo Schmaltz is confined to hospital after undergoing a serious operation.

Mrs. Margaret Rau, aged 76, passed away last Monday. She is survived by six sons and six daughters. Her husband, the late Mr. G. Rau, predeceased her by six years almost to the day.

Mrs. Jake Wittman of Beiseker, Kansas, made the journey to Beiseker upon hearing of the death of Mrs. Rau.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

LAZY BOY

By I. de La Torre

HIS sneaker, raising puffs of dust, Billy raced down the path to the lake. Now he stopped, snatched an overhanging branch and clung to it, gasping for breath. After a backward glance satisfied 'im that the little white schoolhouse no longer showed through the trees, he jerked up his black trousers and shuffled on. "School!" he mumbled to himself. "I'm sick of it! And if Ma puts on any more crying acts when I talk about quitting, it just ain't going to do her any good. I could fake my age and join the Navy to see—Nah! too much orders to take. Maybe I'll just drift around, free like a kite."

Now that his future was so promptly settled, Billy looked around for something to attract his immediate interest. A thin column of smoke rising from the clearing caught his eye.

"Funny time for anybody to have a fire on the beach," he told himself and dashed across. The two men crouching over the fire turned around as Billy approached. Both wore shabby clothes, and their faces looked as if untouched by water or razor for weeks.

"You—you tramps?" Billy blurted. The two men looked at each other and the one sitting on an overturned lard can answered.

"Yeah, we're bums. What you doin' here? Ain't yuh supposed tuh be in school?"

"Sure. Just taking a vacation today," and Billy grinned, pleased with his wit.

The big man who had just spoken picked up a twig, snapped it, and threw it on the fire.

"Hey, Joe," he grunted to his companion, "what yuh say duh kid joins up wid us?" He put his hand on the boy's shoulder.

"You mean go around tramping with you?" Billy broke in.

"Yuh know how tuh ride rails, kid?" Joe inquired.

"Sure—sure I do," Billy wasn't as certain as he sounded, but from what he had seen of "riding the rods" in the movies it looked easy enough.

The first tramp picked up a rusty can and with the aid of a stick propped it in the centre of the crackling twigs. He was still poking it into position as he drawled out, "Hey, Joe. 'Member Horsey Sandler? Jus' heard other day he lost his leg ridin' onnah Sante Fe. Trackman followed up his blood fer 10 miles."

"Aw, that guy couldn't hold on tuh a kiddy car 'out fallen off. Yeah, got woid Beardy Osler got it too las' week. Head crushed 'tween couplers like it was eh squashed egg." Here Joe paused and pointed to Billy's feet.

"Mike, wouldjah ast dah kid tuh gimme his shoes? Mine's ain't got 'nuf sole on 'em tuh grind up fer chewin' tobacco."

"Mine?" Billy cried. He held one foot forward for them to see. "These are my only school shoes and I—"

"Yeah—yours," Mike snarled. "Yuh ain't goin' tuh school no more, is yuh?" He started to stand up but Joe motioned him down. "Aw, lettem have 'em. He'll be wearin' noos-papers 'round his feet soon 'nuf. We get 'nther 40 below winter of las' year an' no doubt dah remains of muh toes'll get frozen off. Hah, mebbe muh feet'll be little 'nuf tuh wrap intuh dah tabloids," he finished, chuckling to himself.

Billy, kneeling beside the fire, watched the dying flames and fidgeted with the buckle on his belt.

"Yuh scratchin' agin?" Mike grunted at his companion.

"Can't help it, Mike. Just thinkin' 'bout dat flop jern last night. Gosh! Dos bedbugs crawlin' over me innah dark was so big I figgered mebbe dey was turtles."

Mike grinned broadly and picked up his stick to poke the can. "Chow's on!" he called to Joe.

Billy leaned over and peered into the can. "What—what is it?" he stammered.

"Stewed pig tails," Mike drawled. "Ain't often we get such luck as tuh get such good eat'n as that, do we Joe?"

"Yeah, 'member dat time we couldn't get nuttin but fish heads otta dah garbage pails? Musta been time wasn't much meat 'round."

"Here, kid," Mike was proudly holding up the can. "New members foist. Gobble it down when it's still good'n hot, boy."

"No—no thanks. I—I—" Billy's lips clenched together and his hands went instinctively over his mouth. He shook his head and fled.

Mike dropped the can, threw back his head and laughed until he sank to the ground exhausted. His companion wiped a laugh-tear away.

"What did you do, Mike?" he panted. "Broil our worms?"

Mike nodded. "The fishing was getting terrible, anyway." He rose wearily off the ground. "Come on, let's look for the canoe and start home. And please remember, dear brother, that it's your turn to take mother to a fish dinner at the Sea-food Grotto."

Railway From Vancouver To Alaska Planned

Project Calls For 1,000 Miles Of New Road To Fairbanks

WASHINGTON. — Plans for construction of a railroad from Vancouver to Fairbanks, Alaska, are under consideration by a group of private investors.

Marshall Ramsey Diggs, Washington counsel for the group, said his clients had been studying the project for several years and he hoped to be able to announce definite plans, along with the names of the backers, within 30 days.

Diggs said the idea calls for taking over 345 miles of railroad now owned by British Columbia and building another 1,000 miles into Fairbanks, where the proposed road would connect with the Alaska railroad.

Diggs predicted that either his group or some other "will start this railroad within three or four years."

"The present plans contemplate that the railroad will be constructed by private capital. We hope that after we reach Alaska our government will aid in the construction but we have received no commitments from it though government officials have shown great interest."

"We are anxious that a railroad be built to the territory for we believe that is the only way it ever will be opened up."

"And, in view of the present Russian situation, we should have such a connection with our territory."

"The railroad will open up vast resources, and in Canada tap country exceedingly rich in natural resources such as coal, timber and pulp wood."

Savings Bonds Still on Sale

Denying reports that the Second Series of Canada Savings Bonds would be withdrawn from sale on November 15th the Hon. Douglas Abbott, minister of finance, said the new security would continue to be available until further notice. "The terms of issue," said Mr. Abbott, "specified that the new bonds could be withdrawn at any time after November 1st, but no decision has yet been taken on the date of withdrawal. From reports compiled by the Bank of Canada, representing sales to the end of November 7 it is clear that buying by the general public is continuing and that some purchases under the Payroll Savings Plan have yet to be recorded."

Bank of Canada figures referred to by Mr. Abbott reveal ed that combined purchases amount to $204,615,950 up to the end of November 7th. This amount, which represented total applications of 684,795, includes purchases under the Payroll Savings Plan of $95,566,400. The average purchase under the Payroll Savings Plan continues high at $199.81. Payroll sales for the province of Ontario are 14 percent ahead of sales to the same day of last year and other regions are running close to last year's figures.
